Malt Whisky's of The Stane Bar

Whisky production has a long standing history in Scotland and as not much has changed over the last 200 years we have had plenty of time to amass a vast collection here at The Stane Bar. With over 70 Malts to sample you are sure to find one to suit you from the many different regions and flavours available. Just ask one of staff to talk you through them!

Highland

A vast area, it incorporates the distilleries built beside the fast-running burns off Speyside; the islands from sparsely populated Jura to the windswept Orkneys; Pulteney and Clynelish in northern mainland Scotland; Oban to the west; Glengarioch to the east and even Glengoyne just a short distance from Glasgow. The styles of whisky are as diverse and striking as the countryside in which the distilleries are set.

Lowland

Distilleries are found south of a line from Greenock to Dundee. Their numbers are falling now and Lowland whisky is becoming increasingly hard to find, which is a shame as its soft, delicate nature is a prime element in the spectrum of Scotch whisky.

Islay

The most dramatic malts are from the beautiful Hebridean island of Islay; peaty, earthy, heavy with iodine, sometimes oily and enormously complex. Bunnahabhain, the 'ladies" whisky, and Bruichladdich are the exceptions to the eight distilleries still on stream, both producing much lighter yet unmistakably island styles of whisky.

Speyside

Speyside single malts are single malt Scotch whiskies, distilled in Strathspey, the area around the River Spey in Moray and Badenoch and Strathspey, in northeastern Scotland.

The two best-selling single malt whiskys in the world, The Glenlivet and Glenfiddich, come from Speyside. Speyside has the greatest number of distilleries of any of the whisky-producing areas of Scotland.

Speyside whiskys can generally be classified as light and grassy (e.g. Glenlivet) or rich and sweet, (e.g. Macallan).
