Blended Whisky, Other Whisky & Rye

Malt whisky is mainly sold to blenders who mix it with grain whisky to give a consistent flavour. Grain whisky is made from a grain other than barley, such as wheat or maize. Two casks of malt, from the same batch aged for the same period of time, will not always be identical to each other, so a blender will use his skill to make one expression.

A much loved favourite. Perfectly balanced with notes of orange citrus, sherry and oak tones.

Bells £2.90

The distinctive taste of Bell's comes from bringing together a select blend of grain and fine malt whiskies, all matured in selected oak casks for a richer flavour.

Black Bottle £3.20

A bottle of the 2013 relaunched Black Bottle. Owners Burn Stewart have decided to return the brand to its original 1879 roots, including the black glass that gave the blend its name.
